How do I count my baby's movements?

- Get into a comfortable position lying on your side or sitting. Place one or both of your hands on your abdomen.
- Count each time that you feel your baby move. If you feel many movements all at once, count each movement that you feel.
- Write down the date and the time that you start counting on the fetal movement chart.
- Make a mark on the chart each time your baby moves

Count your baby's movements once a day. You should feel 6 or more movements in 2 hours.

- Stop counting when you have counted 6 movements.
- Write down the time you stopped counting.
- Do not count for more than 2 hours

What if I don't feel 6 movements in 2 hours?

If you count fewer than 6 movements in 2 hours do not wait. Go to the hospital or birthing unit.

Your baby's heart rate and movements will be checked using a fetal monitor. This is called a non-stress test or NST.

If you live too far from a hospital or birthing unit, immediately contact your health care provider for advice.

About baby's movements

An active baby is usually a healthy baby. You will feel your baby stretch, kick, roll and tur every day. Some babies are more active that others. All babies have periods of sleep duri which they are not as active. You will get to know your baby's pattern of movements and when your baby is most active.

You should feel your baby's movements throughout the day, each day from 28 weeks pregnancy until the baby is born.

When during my pregnancy should I cou my baby's movements?

Your health care provider may ask you to count your baby's movements once every day.

If you think there is a decrease in your baby's movements this is an important sign your baby may not be well. Count your bab movements to be sure that you feel at least movements in 2 hours
